Proven Winners

SUPERBELLS Calibrachoa hybrids

Woo-hoo! There is nothing more super than Superbells. Calibrachoa are a new type of plants that sort of look like little Petunias. Superbells aren't sticky, perk right back up after it rains, and stay compact and bushy even when stressed. Superbells are Proven Winners' newest Calibrachoa. They're covered with hundreds of flowers from early spring to the first light frosts. Just 6 - 10 inches tall, long trailing branches cascade over the sides of hanging baskets and other containers, and spread over flower beds.

Vigor, heat tolerance and resistance to disease. Annual except in zones 9 - 11. No deadhead old flowers or pinch back stems. Water only when the top of the soil feels dry. Too much water makes roots rot. Full sun. Fertilize once a month. How extra double super easy is that?

Coleus Growing Tips

Many people feel that coleus look best before they flower. To keep foliage in top shape, pinch off the blooms as they appear if you wish.

Rules of Thumb for Overwintering Plants Indoors:

1. Choose only healthy plants
2. Bring Plants indoors before frost damages foliage
3. Treat for disease and insects before bringing plants indoors
4. Place in bright areas and add humidity using pebble trays or spray bottles
5. Be careful not to over water
- 6 When active growth starts in spring fertilize and prune as needed
7. Introduce your plants slowly to outdoor conditions in spring

What to Plant

This reference guide is designed to provide you with the necessary information to create a beautiful outdoor living area and garden. Please keep in mind that each plant variety offers different benefits, whether it is spring flowers, brilliant fall colours or year- round foliage. Here are a few helpful terms that will appear throughout this guide:

Annual – Plant with a live cycle for only one year.

Deciduous – Sheds leaves annually.

Evergreen – Retains leaves year round.

Perennial – Lasting for many years. This group of plants may appear to die at the surface at times but will trimming reappear in the spring if properly trimmed.

Groundcover – Plants used to cover ground. This grouping of plants is used for slopes, low sun locations, erosion control, challenging soil conditions or even as a grass substitute.

How to Plant

1. a hole 2 to 3 times the width and 1 ½ times the depth of the container.

2. Tip the plant 45 degrees and gently remove it from the container.

3. Mix ½ of dug soil with soil conditioner or organic mix that is recommended for your area by your nursery professional. Add a few centimeters to the bottom of the hole.

4. Place the root ball into the hole so that the top of it is slightly below the surface. Refill with the soil mixture.

5. Water immediately to settle the soil and add more soil mix until soil is even with the surface.

6. Add a few centimeters of mulch to help retain moisture and to keep roots cool. Water again.

7. Water regularly in the evening or early morning until the plant is fully established.

When in doubt,
ask your local professional.

Trees

Autumn Blaze® Maple

Acer freemanii 'Jeffersred'

Fast growing deciduous shade tree with deeply lobed rich green leaves, turning spectacular shades of orange-red in fall. A hybrid of Red and Silver Maple that has become one of the most popular street and landscape trees in North America. Drought tolerant once established.

Zone 4 Full sun 15m tall x 12m wide (50' tall x 40' wide)

Korean Maple

Acer pseudosieboldianum

Small ornamental tree with bronze-green lobed foliage turning a blend of yellow, orange and red in fall. Good as a specimen or accent plant. Interesting bark and branching give a Japanese Maple characteristic to the landscape in the colder climate areas. Great near water features.

Zone 3 Full sun to part shade 5m tall x 3m wide (16' tall x 10' wide)

Amur Maple

Acer ginnala

A small tree or multi-stemmed shrub with a fine textural graceful spreading form. Fragrant yellowwhite flowers in spring. Attractive glossy green lobed foliage in summer turns a vivid scarlet in fall. Prefers slightly acidic soil. Drought tolerant.

Zone 4 Full sun to part shade 6m tall x 4m wide (20' tall x 13' wide)

Paper Birch

Betula papyrifera

One of the most permanent and desirable of all white barked Birches. Attractive chalk-white colour to the bark when older. Dark green foliage turns a striking yellow in fall. Great screen or park tree. Can be grown as single or multi-stemmed specimen.
